

Keeping Focus

by Dan Precourt

I was at mini soccer last night and as much as I love to spend time with my kids the couch sure was calling. I coach my 5 year-old son and some of his friends old and new. It is pretty cool to see the progress they have made even in the last few weeks. Some of their progress is just in their focus. It is a busy time for everyone. All the outside sports, chores, going here and there and add work to the mix – I was talking about the kids wasn't I? Oops. A Good friend advised me to coach the kids – 3 years ago I started with my Daughter- and he was right. It is such a busy time of year for me that coaching makes sure that I am at the games and I am focused on the kids, no phone to answer, emails to return or quotes to write and there for that one moment where they score their first goal. That was some of the best advice in a long time. The truth though is that a break is definitely a good thing once in a while. We have been going steady for about 7 weeks now looking at exterior after exterior and of course the many interior projects that we do all year long. It's a lot of fun for me still even after 14 years and mainly I think because I enjoy meeting new people and being the one they trust to work in their home, their office or of course the cottage.

Adding to the busyness of the season of course it's the crazy cold and wet weather we've had recently. Our whole team takes a lot of pride in our schedule and staying on it. There has been plenty of juggling going on these days. Our interior clients love this. Everyone is jumping the queue. The real weather is coming though- I keep telling myself this- and we'll get back on track. As for our schedule, we are focussed on getting your project in this season. So before you pack up for the lake or vacation please know we will be confidently accepting new exterior projects for this season well into August so please do not hesitate to call.
